

The Manifestation of Altruistic Element of Qualitative Aspects of Home

Abstract

Home as a place of residence has the most extensive and intimate relationship with the human being. Paying attention to the needs and life style of the human being at home is an essential factor showing the functions which give home a conceptual and non-physical and sometimes humane aspect. This concept makes home a place for sheltering and maintaining human values. Considering only the materialistic aspect and losing sight of the quality of homes is one of the emotional and spiritual problems of humans, denying him/her of the his/her innermost needs and requirements and makes him/her alienated.

The main objective of the present paper is to strive to improve the qualitative aspect of home by directing and harmonizing the holy and the highest desires and requirements. After familiarizing the reader with the concept of residence and the element of altruism, the paper seeks to achieve the true understanding of the qualitative aspect of home through a short review of literature in the field. In this regard, the qualitative aspects of home is divided into social, cultural, emotional, spiritual and physical aspects.

Human being by nature has a tendency to perfection. One of these desires is the element of altruism, which will be explained in the present paper. Considering this goal, the way the altruistic element will be elaborated. There are features that lead home toward being an ideal home and ultimately these features improve the quality of home.